Natural Deposits in British East Africa Form an Almost Inexhaustlble Supply.

The railroad builders in British East Africa have just completed a branch from the main Uganda line to the shores of Lake Mogadi, where there is a marvelous soda deposit. Normally this strange lake appears I w days' stay on business. Misses Lulu and Sallie Bryarly as if it had frozen and snow had fallen, and that the snow had then partially thawed and frozen solid again. The heat is extreme. The soda burns the feet through the boots and the crystalline spikes, which look like hoarfrost, will pierce any but the thickest sole. After the rains there is a layer of water over the greater part of the lake, which turns a lovely pink color, giving the whole a wonderfully beautiful appearance. By moonlight the scene is most weird and never to be forgotten. It is estimated that the lake contains at least 200,000,000 tons of crystalline substances composed almost equally of carbonate and bicarbonate of soda in the natural state, and con-Col. A. A. COSTLY BICYCLE LESSON.

President Poincare of France, who was present at the finish of a recent cycle meet at Paris, the great bicycle race of the year, told the winner an amusing story of his own first and only attempt to ride a bicycle. "I have always been afraid of bicycles," he said, "but in 1892 a friend, who is now a well-know lawyer, was very anxious that I should learn to ride. He persuaded me to mount his own bicycle on a quiet path in his garden. He helped me into the saddle, gave the machine a little push, and waited to see what would happen. He did not wait very long. I rolled ten yards at great speed and crashed into a rose bush
